...You are an experienced, independent and confident professional, well versed in the trends of the consumer markets and have much to contribute to the market research arena. The demand for the skills of international market researchers is rapidly increasing and you can benefit by capitalising on this wave. You will be a valuable asset to the local market of your chosen country, with many opportunities for promotion to higher levels professionally than you currently inhabit...

...You want to be valued for your qualities as a leader in your field of qualitative, and/or quantitative research or analytics, your innovative and comprehensive approach to problem solving, relationship building and teamwork.

... You want to broaden your perspective – living and working in a new culture is a rewarding and enriching experience and first-hand knowledge and experience within the industries of multiple countries equips you with the tools for real success in today's global market...

...Many companies offer attractive expat packages with major benefits to individuals and families, often including accommodation, relocation costs, travel home and living away from home allowances. Where relocation costs are not offered, it is often beneficial for you to visit a country for face to face interviews on your own accord. Many countries also have tax benefits that compare very favourably with your home country...
